"Can screentime be a good thing?"

TIPS FOR PRACTICING SPEECH & LANGUAGE USING VIDEO FILTERS

Almost all parents have social media accounts.

Many enjoy sharing funny videos with their kids, but did you know you can use the video filters as language learning opportunities?

MYTHS:

- Speech & language practice should always be structured.
- Kids are too distracted to learn while playing with filters
- Only teachers and clinicians know how to create learning opportunities

FACTS:

- A less structured setting is more natural and better for generalization.
- Kids learn best when they are having fun. Setting boundaries, such as time limits, prevents too much screen time.
- Professionals should empower parents with the tools necessary to find language learning opportunities all around them!

EXPRESSIVE LANGUAGE

Describe filter, label objects, make requests for filters

RECEPTIVE LANGUAGE

Following directions (e.g., how to use the filter)

EXPRESSIVE & RECEPTIVE LANGUAGE

Wh- questions: Who, what, where, when, why, how

SOCIAL LANGUAGE

Facial expressions, emotions, turn taking, finding humor

SPEECH SOUNDS

Find filters with target sounds (e.g., robot filter for "r").
